

Oak Class

Eva completing a science experiment linked to learning about the circulatory system.

Peyton created a model of the heart linked to science learning about the circulatory system.

James' math work on fractions.

The Island of Joya is an abandoned island that is not known to the rest of the world like an unknown mystery waiting to be found. It is surrounded by deep blue sea that sparkles like the stars in the sky. On the island there is a deep dark spooky forest that is full of thick sharp thorns that cut you like the blades of a knife as you walk through them. The market is busy with lots of blue awnings flapping like wings of a bird and just one yellow one that looked like the sun surrounded by the sky. The people had to queue with the patience of saints to get the water like soldiers on duty. The people lived in houses made of thick mud with itchy straw roofs.

Jack S